

Series 1 and 2 Sunshine Phonics Decodable Books Scope and Sequence

New Australian series with real stories using words that children can read!

The Sunshine Phonics Decodable program teaches children phonics skills in a sequential and systematic way so that they can learn the sounds (phonemes) and the letters that represent them (graphemes) and then apply this knowledge by reading a text that makes sense and is enjoyable. This ensures that every beginning reader experiences success in their reading from their very first book!

The program comprises Series 1 and Series 2 and features:

- Fully decodable texts closely aligned with Letters and Sounds
- Systematic progression for learning the sounds (phonemes) and the letters that represent them (graphemes)
- Full-colour illustrations to support meaning
- Teaching notes included in each book
- The complete program covers 44 phonemes of English
- 180 titles, fiction and non-fiction
- Five Teachers' Books

Introduction

Welcome to Sunshine Phonics Decodables Series 1 and 2!

Sunshine Phonics Decodables Series 1 and 2 teach children phonics skills in a sequential and systematic way so that they can learn sounds (phonemes) and the letters that represent them (graphemes) and then apply this knowledge by reading enjoyable stories. This ensures that every beginning reader experiences success in reading from their very first book! While the process of reading is complex, the teaching of it does not need to be.

What are decodable texts?

Decodable texts are designed to support a synthetic phonics method of teaching reading. In synthetic phonics, phonemes and graphemes are taught explicitly and systematically. In decodable books, the text is controlled by and limited to the phonemes and graphemes that have been taught to that point. For example, the first set of books may be based on children only needing to know the sounds for s a t p i n m d. Only words using these sounds are used in the text so children are able to practise their growing phonic knowledge by reading books containing only words that they can decode. The exception to this would be the use of some high-frequency words that may not be easily decodable at that point but are necessary for all stories. These words are referred to as common exception words or tricky words because they include a letter or combination of letters that represents a sound pattern children have not yet been taught. Some examples of these words early in the program are: the, he, no, is, to.

The vocabulary used in the first set of books based on a non-decodable approach is not controlled in this way. All 44 sounds of English and the letters that represent them can be used to a large extent. For example, the word sky could be used. Sky is a simple word in that it is only three letters, but it is not easily decodable unless you know that the letter y also makes the long i sound. Beginning readers may need to look for a picture clue, or to predict what the word may be from the context of the sentence or from the letters at the start of the word (or all of those). This is a challenge that not all children may be up to in the early stages of reading.

All words are decodable if the child knows the sounds for s a t p i n m d

There are more similarities than differences between decodable and non-decodable texts. The vocabulary control is the main difference. It is important to remember that all texts for beginning readers (whether decodable or not) have controlled vocabulary. You wouldn't see the word psyche in any beginning reader text! Why? Because a young child would not have an understanding of the meaning of this word and it is a difficult word to decode with several challenges such as the silent p, y as long /i/ sound, ch as /k/ sound and e as long /e/ sound. So both types of texts have vocabulary control, but it is the type of vocabulary control that differentiates decodable texts.

With decodable texts, children may still look to the picture for a clue and can still consider the context. The key difference is that they do not need to rely on these other strategies as they have the tools to sound out every part of the words in front of them.

Good decodable texts still carry a story. They still require pre-reading discussion and predicting. They still introduce new vocabulary. They still have a good picture-to-text match and they still require comprehension. What they don't rely on so much is the need for children to make guesses at unknown words because every word is decodable based on the phonemes that they have learnt to that point. As a result, there should also be less reliance on picture clues or the need for the text to be repetitive in structure.

Teaching a new phoneme/grapheme

Before reading the books in each set, children need to be taught the graphemes and phonemes they will meet. Once they know some sounds they will be able to start learning to sound them out and blend them to read words. Before starting the first set of books children need to know the sounds for s a t p i n m d and should be able to start blending some CVC words using these sounds.

Children working through the Sunshine Phonics Decodables program learn 23 phonemes (sounds) and the common graphemes (letter/s) that represent them in Sets 1–3 (of both Series). In Sets 4–5 (of both Series), children learn further phonemes and many new alternative graphemes. They also learn consonant and vowel digraphs (two letters, one sound) and trigraphs (three letters, one sound). Series 1, Sets 4–5 and Series 2, Sets 6–7 teach adjacent consonants with short and long vowels. Finally, in Series 1, Sets 6–7 and Series 2, Sets 8–11, children learn alternative graphemes for the phonemes they already know (plus one last phoneme, the /zh/ sound as in television).

How do you teach a new phoneme/grapheme?

Review previous learning

Re-visit the new phoneme/s and grapheme/s children learnt in the previous book/s from the current set, saying the sound when you hold up a flashcard or write it up.

Explain the learning intention for this lesson

Tell children that in this lesson they will be learning a new sound and the letter or letters that represent it. Or they may be learning alternative graphemes (letters) for phonemes they already know. This means learning a new spelling for a known sound, e.g. that /f/ can now be spelt ph.

Say the sound

Say the sound, e.g. /sh/, and ask children to repeat the sound after you. Say it several times. Say some words that start with the phoneme, e.g. ship, shiver. Have children repeat these words after you. If the sound appears in the middle of or at the end of words, say some of these words too with children repeating them after you, e.g. fish, dishes, rushed.

Show the focus grapheme/s (letter/s)

Use a picture/letter card with the focus grapheme, e.g. sh, and a matching illustration, e.g. a shell. Point to the grapheme and say the sound /sh/. Then point to the illustration and say the word shell. Ask children to do this with you as you point to the grapheme and then the illustration and repeat this several times. Use the same technique when teaching an alternative grapheme for a known phoneme (e.g. teaching ph as an alternative spelling for /f/).

Write the new grapheme

Write the grapheme showing children where to start each letter and verbalising the actions to complete the letter formation. Repeat, getting children to copy you, writing in the air. They then practise writing the new grapheme on small whiteboards or on paper.

Blend to read words

Practise sounding out and blending words that feature the focus sound/grapheme. Use word cards with sound buttons under each sound or write the words on a whiteboard with a dot under each sound and a dash under two or more letters that make the sound (digraphs and trigraphs). Model how to point to each sound as you say it. Then run your finger under all the sounds as you blend them to read the word. Encourage children to do this with you and then they can practise on their own or with a partner, either using word cards or writing these words themselves. Teachers may find the Word Banks in the Teachers' Books for each set of sounds helpful.

Teaching tricky words

What is a "common exception word" or "tricky word"?

This is any word that has a sound or letter-sound correspondence in it that children have not been taught at that point. These words are hard to sound out with the existing letter-sound correspondence knowledge that children have. What is a tricky word at one point will become not tricky once the relevant phonemes and their varying graphemes are taught. Some words remain tricky throughout the program.

In a decodable reading series, the first tricky words introduced are usually from the first 100 high-frequency words list. Some words from this list are decodable, e.g. at, in, but many are not. Being high-frequency words, children are very likely to meet them in the books they read and so will need to know them.

Let's look at an example. The word was is usually introduced very early in beginning reading texts because it is a high-frequency word that, as its name suggests, appears a lot in English texts. It is one of the glue words that helps to bind a sentence and story together. It is just a small word of only three letters, but from a decoding point of view, it offers challenges that make it tricky at the early stages of reading.

One of the grapheme-phoneme correspondences in the word was is not taught to children until Set 10 of our program. This is the grapheme a, which in this word makes the phoneme /o/. Once this grapheme-phoneme correspondence is taught, then the word is no longer tricky.

How do you teach a tricky word?

Traditionally, tricky words have been taught to children as a whole "by sight", using flashcards and repetition. The reality is that most tricky words only have tricky parts – children will be able to read the rest of the word. This means that these words can be analysed and decoded with children to better help them understand and remember them.

So let's say the word being introduced is out. Before Set 9, children have not yet learnt that the phoneme /ow/ can also be written with the grapheme ou. They do, however, know the common sound for /t/. So the tricky part of this word is the first sound represented by the grapheme ou. For this word, start by reading the word to children and getting them to repeat it. Then read the word phoneme by phoneme (sound buttons and dashes under the two or more letters making a single sound can help), pointing to the letters as you say the sounds. Then point to the parts of the word that children know and ask them to give you the sounds. Lastly, point out the tricky part and tell them the sound this letter or letters make. This way, children can draw on and apply the phonic knowledge that they have while also learning about the tricky part of the word so that they can read it. Re-visit the words you are teaching often and remind children that the words are tricky before they attempt to read them.

Getting Started

1. Review the Phonics Overview to understand the order in which phonemes and graphemes are introduced in the program.
2. Review the Scope and Sequence charts to get a more detailed overview of the skills introduced at each stage of the program.
3. If children are not starting the program at the beginning, then choose a set and assess them using Assessment 1 for that set as a pre-test. This will help you to place children at the correct stage of the program and to form small teaching groups based on individual needs. If children have been working through the program sequentially, pre-testing may not be necessary for placement purposes. If there is not 95% mastery at pre-test level, then there are gaps in the child's phonics knowledge which need to be addressed. Use the pre-test for the previous set(s) until you find the set which the child can read at 95% mastery. The child will benefit from starting the program at that point, revising and consolidating known skills and learning and mastering the knowledge gaps. As the program introduces new skills sequentially, no step can be skipped.
4. Start with the first book in the set you are using and teach the new phoneme/s and grapheme/s. Provide explicit teaching using the teaching notes for that book and use the follow up Activity Sheets to reinforce new learning.
5. As children learn new sounds, encourage them to blend the sounds to read words. There are Word Banks in the Teachers' Books that provide a list of words to blend for each set of books.
6. Teach new Tricky Words as they come up in the books. See page 5 for ideas.
7. Once a set of books has been read, children could be assessed using Assessment 2 for that set or this could be left until a later stage.
8. Now you are ready to start teaching the next set of new phonemes and graphemes starting with the first book of that set.

Meet the characters

While the Sunshine Phonics books are decodable texts, they are also real stories! The stories in Series 1 Sets 1–5 and Series 2 Sets 1–7 follow the adventures of Sam, Dan and Nat, their family, their pets and friends. Young children can relate to the fun storylines and always enjoy the humorous endings.

Inside Front Cover

The inside front cover of each book provides the Before Reading focus for the children. Here they will review the sounds they have learnt and practise blending those sounds to make the words that they will meet in the story. Tricky Words are also reviewed.

to is the go Go

At the end of each book, teachers will find a summary of teaching points applicable to the level of the book. This may include:

- focus/review phonemes/graphemes
- words to blend
- vocabulary check
- pre-reading and after reading discussion
- comprehension
- fluency

Example of a Set 8 book

SET 8: Story 77

Skid, slide, ride

Before Reading

Synopsis: Mike's bike did a big slide when he rode up The Bumpy Track with Dad. Now his friends want him to ride the track with them. Will Mike be able to do it?

Review Phonemes and Graphemes: /t/ ph; /w/ wh; /ai/ ay, a-e, ea, eigh, ey, aigh, a; /ee/ ea, e-e, y, ey, ie, e

Focus Phoneme: /igh/ Focus Graphemes: i-e, ie

Story discussion: Look at the cover, and read the title together. Talk about bikes – do any of the children ride bikes? Ask: What kind of book do you think this will be, fiction or non-fiction? Why do you think that? What do you think might happen in this book?

Link to prior learning: Remind children that the sound /igh/ as in 'night' can also be spelled 'i-e' and 'ie'. Turn to pages 2–3 and ask children to find a word with each spelling of the /igh/ sound (ride, beside, Miles, Mike, cries, tries, smile).

Vocabulary check: rise: an upward slope or a little hill.

Decoding practice: Display the words 'bike', 'tries', 'flies' and 'ride'. Can children circle the letter string that makes the /igh/ sound, and read each word?

Tricky word practice: Display the word 'there'. Explain that although this word contains the letter string 'ere', like in 'here', it is pronounced to rhyme with 'air' in this word. Practise reading and writing this word.

In addition to the summary of teaching points provided in each book, we also offer five comprehensive Teachers' Books. Each Teachers' Book includes:

- Phonics Overview for the appropriate series
- Scope and Sequence
- Explicit Small Group Teaching Notes
- Photocopiable Activity Pages for every book
- Word Banks
- Assessments
